Regional Meeting minutes

The Chicago Dental Society convened its Regional Meeting Oct. 28 at the Drury Lane Oak Brook in Oakbrook Terrace, with CDS President Susan Becker Doroshow presiding. Dr. Doroshow called the meeting to order at 9:03 a.m.

Attention was directed to the minutes of the meeting of Sept. 16. Inasmuch as the official minutes of the meeting of Sept. 16 had not yet been published, Dr. Doroshow said she would forgo the reading and approving of the minutes at this time until everyone had an opportunity to review them.

MOVED by Roger Pardon, seconded by Dorothy Anasinski and carried to forgo the reading and approving of the minutes of the Sept. 16 Regional Meeting at this time as they had not yet been published.

There were no reports of the Board, Standing or Special committees. There was no Unfinished Business to report.

NEW BUSINESS: Dr. Doroshow reported that nominating petitions for the 2016 officers have been duly filed in the CDS central office, and their names duly published in previous issues of the CDS Review in both print and digital formats, in accordance with the bylaws.

Since not more than one candidate has been nominated for each elective office, in accordance with CDS Bylaws, Dr. Doroshow entertained a motion to direct the secretary to cast a single unanimous ballot on behalf of all the respective candidates for office.

MOVED by Dr. Pardon, seconded by Dr. Anasinski, and carried, that a single unanimous ballot be cast on behalf of all the respective candidates for office.

Dr. Doroshow then congratulated Terri Tierisky, treasurer-elect; Cheryl Watson-Lowry, vice president-elect; Louis Imburgia, secretary-elect; and Phillip Fijal, who will become president-elect.

She noted that these officers would be installed Nov. 15 along with George Zehak, who will assume the office of president. These officers will assume their respective duties Jan. 1, 2016, and will continue through Dec. 31 in accordance with the fiscal year. Dr. Doroshow noted that the Society’s 50-year graduates would also be recognized at that time.

Dr. Doroshow extended an open invitation to all CDS members, their families and friends to join them on this occasion at The Drake Hotel, to personally congratulate them and wish them well while enjoying refreshments.

With no further business, Dr. Doroshow called upon Dr. Anasinski, the Regional Meeting program chair, to introduce David Resch, DDS, who presented a program entitled “Teach Me How to OSHA!”

The meeting was adjourned at approximately 1:55 p.m.

I APPLAUD OUR EDITOR Walter Lamacki for his attempt to share the challenges of universal licensure in an ever-changing landscape (September/October CDS Review “It’s time for a universal licensure exam”). I wish to add to the conversation.

Initially, all five regional testing agencies came to the table for a collaborative discussion on licensure examinations. The construct included: content of the exam based on an occupational analysis, criteria for evaluation of procedures and scoring of the components in a psychometrically sound examination.

As often happens, politics, personal agendas and – ultimately – philosophical differences caused the collaboration to deteriorate.

Currently, three testing agencies develop and administer exams and two testing agencies administer the exam developed by the American Board of Dental Examiners. The Objective Structured Clinical Examination (OSCE) is administered in two U.S. schools because Canadian citizens are members of the student body in those institutions. The OSCE, along with the New York and California models for initial licensure, have extremely limited portability in most instances.

Testing agency activity is at the behest of state dental boards and their regulations. Their regulations are not uniform in either initial licensure, nor licensure by credential, thereby creating a portability issue.

Each agency develops its exam to meet as many of the state requirements for licensure as possible. All states could accept all exams, which could solve the dilemma.

It is critical that as we discuss licensure as we consider the consequences for our increasingly mobile colleagues. We owe it to the newest members of our profession.

Foul air and (un)fair play?

Since the 2009 debut of its TDI Clean Diesel engine, Volkswagen has been enjoying record sales in the United States. Elsewhere in the industry, CEOs and marketing heads watched helplessly as VW gained diesel dominance in the American marketplace. Engineers at other automakers struggled to answer the question of how? “How is the VW engine able to outperform ours?” engineers asked themselves.

I’ve been asking myself a similar “how” every time a Preferred Dentist Plan schedule of allowances and sample contract lands on my office desk. How? How can other dentists comply with all of the terms of this plan and still earn a fair income?

The “secret” to VW’s success became public in September: Clean diesel supremacy was not due to an engineering feat proven on the test track, but was a result of creative computer codes cooked up by information technologists. Because passenger vehicles equipped with the new engine could not meet federal Environmental Protection Agency emissions standards, VW resorted to cheating.

By the time the news of VW’s digital shenanigans came to light, it’s likely industry insiders suspected for years that something fishy was going on. After all, “defeat” devices to trick emissions tests have been around for almost as long as the Clean Air Act of 1963.

A plausible answer to my how came just weeks earlier, when this headline appeared on the front page of the Aug. 15 issue of ADA News: “United Concordia to deny claims with routine periapical X-rays on patients without symptoms.” UC would now require narrative statements and submissions of the periapical X-rays taken during periodic exams; in the absence of signs and symptoms, payments would be denied.

Aha! Could it be that preferred providers as a group were billing a greater number of periapical X-rays than non-participating dentists? Was all of this new red tape due to suspicion, or even to conclusive evidence at UC, of gaming or outright fraud? It’s hard to believe that a colleague would risk license and livelihood for less than the cost of a few McDonald’s Extra Value Meals, but UC’s demand for the actual X-rays is cause to believe some billed for radiographs that had never been taken or were coded inaccurately.

VW’s market success came at an environmental cost that we’ll all have to pay. By the same token, the cost of the clinically questionable, or downright fraudulent, periapical X-rays will be borne by every contracted dentist and every covered patient. As a result of UC’s reimbursement policy, will some indicated radiographs be bypassed? Taken, but not billed for? Or will the extra clerical time involved be simply one additional burden for a dentist who is already finding it a challenge to cover her expenses and leave the office each week with enough to pay the bills at home?

Two different industries, two sides of the same coin: In an intensely competitive marketplace, it is fair to do anything to gain market share. No matter what the game, there are always players who choose bending the rules over fair play, and, as much as the idealist in me would like to believe otherwise, dentistry is no different. Insurance gaming and fraud are nothing new and have been around for as long as there have been third-party payers.

Just as no one forced VW to bring to the market a product that wouldn’t be profitable if it were re-engineered to meet the requirements of the Clean Air Act, no dentist is compelled to enter into a preferred provider agreement if they believe that its terms make it impossible to earn an acceptable income.

I’m sick of watching from the sidelines of what looks to me like an uneven playing field. So be angry, if you’d like, about United Concordia’s new X-ray policy, but I’m not. If any of my colleagues in this game are playing along by cheating, it’s about time that someone cried, “foul!”

BUILD A BETTER DENTAL TEAM

by Stephanie Sisk

YOU WANT TO BUILD A TOP-NOTCH DENTAL PRACTICE WITH A “ROCK STAR” TEAM. It doesn’t happen by accident.

To create the exceptional practice a dentist envisions, several crucial components must come together. The task requires investing time, setting priorities and making a commitment to build and maintain the best possible office and team.

While it is true that a dentist’s highest priority – his or her calling, really – is the patient, putting together a recipe for success means first defining the office culture, then hiring the right players for the right positions and finally cultivating those rock stars with respect, recognition and compensation.

DEFINE THE OFFICE CULTURE

The place to start is with a definition of the dental practice culture, envisioned by the dentist and, later, polished in collaboration with the team.

While an office manual will cover the nuts and bolts of routing paperwork and ordering supplies, an office culture guidebook will focus on “soft skills,” explained Judy Kay Mausolf, a dental management consultant based in Minnesota, including behavior expectations, leadership and communication channels. Descriptions should be specific, not only to improve accountability but also to head off misunderstandings, disputes or obstacles, she said.

“Set standards, don’t allow double standards; live and maintain those standards,” advised Ms. Mausolf. Living and acting with integrity, setting the bar high with positive inspiration, and forgiving yourself and others creates a tone for the office that will have employees working up to their personal as well as professional potential.

While it would seem natural for a new dentist to set his or her office culture vision from the start, Ms. Mausolf said she most often is called about 10 to 15 years into a dentist’s practice to help reorganize the culture and clarify standards. Typically some bad habits have to be broken, but she said in that time of reorganization, the dentist and office need to set the past aside and say, “Let’s move forward.”

“It comes down to making that commitment,” she said. “It’s prioritizing what’s important.”

Calling in the team to help refine the culture helps to give everyone “ownership” in the success of the office, Ms. Mausolf said. It also is a tangible way for the dentist to show the staff respect, incorporate their ideas and allow feedback on matters of importance.

HIRE THE BEST PEOPLE

With a vision defined for the office culture, dentists must stock their practice with the right people; those who have the professional skills as well as the personality and character that will contribute to helping an office thrive.

There are many resources to tap for advice on hiring, but the ultimate mantra should be to hire for character, attitude and initiative. While employees can be trained or their skills enhanced, essential character traits and values cannot be taught on the job.

According to health care consultant Penny Limoli of Limoli and Associates in Tennessee, “most of the issues we see and coach in clients’ offices have to do with attitudes, immaturity or an inability to connect and communicate with others.”

That’s why the interview process should be thorough and unhurried. Recruiters advise that candidates should fill out an application, then be interviewed in person with an important follow-up interview by telephone. Continuing the interview by phone may seem superfluous, but listening to a candidate on the phone presents an invaluable opportunity to assess tone, poise, phone skills and the ability to think and respond quickly.

An easy extra step here to remind those employees, new and veteran, of their appreciated roles is to record their hiring dates. On their anniversary dates, dentists can take them out to lunch, give them a unique gift and let them know how much they’re appreciated.

An office culture defined, check. A top-notch staff assembled, check. It’s off to the races.

Not so fast; there’s more.

LEAD by example

In setting the standards for the practice, dental consultant Judy Kay Mausolf said dentists should be willing to lead by example:

- Be willing to roll your sleeves up and do it together.
- If you ask a co-worker to do something, make sure you’d be willing to do it yourself.
- If you implement new rules for the office, then follow those rules just as closely as you expect everyone else to follow them.
- Enlist the help of others in making difficult decisions.
- Acknowledge mistakes, apologize and make amends.
- Develop a work and home environment that supports the personal integrity of others.
- Keep your word.
- Let your actions speak louder than words.
- Keep a smile and spread the positive atmosphere around with tangible reminders like signs or notes with inspirational quotes.
- Listen, discuss and agree on how to avoid disputes or misunderstandings in the future.
- Tell them you are sorry if you caused them any discomfort or hurt feelings.
- Tell them you forgive them and you would like to start fresh and move forward.
NURTURE AND RETAIN THE STAFF
Developing and keeping that ace staff requires personal investment along with a step-by-step “treatment plan” for ensuring those great employees continue to grow and shine. But one hitch to that plan is complacency, the impulse to slide into “autopilot” with a high-performance team.

“All too often,” cautioned consultants with the Washington, DC-based The Management Center, “managers don’t pay a lot of attention to developing and retaining their high performers – because, after all, their work is going smoothly and isn’t demanding immediate attention – and then are blindsided when a rock star announces that she’s accepted another offer.”

Standout employees, particularly those in high-demand jobs, can also be enticed away by another office.

“Different people will be more motivated by some than others, so it’s important for managers to really understand what their employees care about,” explained Alison Green of The Management Center. “For example, one person might especially care about professional growth and feeling their role allows for real responsibility, whereas another person might be much more motivated by salary, and another might care most about really feeling appreciated. Smart managers will get a sense of what matters most to staff who they value. One easy way to do that, of course, is to directly ask people about it — sit down with your best people periodically and ask what it will take to keep them on.”

One might think the close working conditions that prevail in a dental office satisfies the employee’s need for feedback and one-on-one time. Not true.

“Even when you’re working closely with an employee on a regular basis, it’s still valuable to have regular one-on-one check-ins,” Green said, “because that’s a structured time where you can be deliberate about stepping back and reflecting on how things are going, giving feedback, talking about any big-picture issues and finding out how the employee is doing. Those items often get lost in the rush of day-to-day work, so it’s really helpful to have a set time where you’re specifically charged with doing that.”

Leadership and vision on the part of a dentist – that is, combining technical and administrative skills with intangibles like trust, vision, empathy and honesty – are key in establishing a top-notch practice, not only one that inspires pride for the dentist but also gives employees a sense of fulfillment and common purpose. To retain your high performers, do it – you should find that they’re worth every penny and then some.”

RECOGNIZING THE VALUE TOP-PERFORMING EMPLOYEES ADD to the business – as well as the cost to find and train a replacement – prompted the Washington, DC-based The Management Center to outline some strategies:

• Help her grow in her role. Almost by definition, great employees want to continuously learn and expand their skills and responsibilities. “To make sure your staff member doesn’t need to seek growth somewhere else, work with her to set stretch goals that will move her out of her comfort zone, add new responsibilities to her plate when she’s ready for them and talk explicitly with her about how she can continue to grow. (Of course, make sure your high performer wants this. Not everyone is excited about increased responsibilities, and you don’t want to push a high performer into something that feels like a burden. So know her preferences – and ask if you’re not sure.)”

• Involve her in discussions about the evolution of her role. “Talk with your staff member about how what she’ll accomplish in the next year ties to what the organization is trying to achieve. Make sure she understands how crucial her work is and how it fits in with the whole.”

• Make sure she knows how much she’s appreciated. “Too often, high performers leave because they don’t feel recognized or valued, so make sure she knows how much you appreciate her contributions and talk explicitly with her about the impact her work has had on your team or organization. This means more than the regular ‘great job’, it means being specific about why it was a ‘great job.’”

• Use “stay interviews.” “Instead of worrying about whether a high performer is happy in her role and planning to stay long-term, you can simply ask directly: ‘You’re crucial to our work. How can we make sure that you stay for the next two (five or 10) years?’ You might do this over coffee or lunch, or as part of a performance evaluation discussion. And even if you don’t get a clear commitment, having an explicit discussion and showing that you care enough to be thinking about it can make a big impression that will factor into her thinking about her role with you.”

• Don’t forget about money. “While great employees generally aren’t motivated primarily by money, we’ve been surprised by how much it can help. While organizations understandably often want to put as much money as possible into direct program work, the reality is that without the best possible people to execute those programs well, your results will suffer. After all, one high performer will generally get better outcomes than several so-so performers combined, so if you have an opportunity to differentiate your best people’s pay, do it – you should find that they’re worth every penny and then some.”

416 E. Roosevelt Rd., Suite 102, Wheaton, IL 60187
A summer flood was a temporary setback for the Chicago Dental Society Foundation Clinic, which welcomed patients into its fully restored operatories Sept. 28. Eager volunteers, tireless staff and committed patients ensured the damage done by a June 15 storm was mediated and the clinic was back to business as usual in three months’ time.

“Even while the space was under construction, patients were stopping by to inquire about the progress. It was very encouraging,” said Robin Gathman, trade show and special events manager at Planmeca USA Inc. who also serves as the CDS Foundation Clinic Board of Managers’ vice president of marketing.

Their job was not easy. Carpeting, drywall, equipment and supplies had been damaged by water that seeped into the Wheaton office complex during a weekend storm in June, making the three-operator, free clinic unsuitable for patient care. While clinic staff members Dottie Mackie and Melissa Simon cleared the schedule of patients and volunteers, the clinic’s Board of Managers, foundation leaders, the clinic’s landlord and insurance officials got to work, too, so that the clinic might reopen quickly.

CDS Foundation Executive Director Kristen Weber said work began immediately to restore the damaged areas of the clinic, and make a few other desired improvements. Among them, Operatory Two, which had been left behind by the previous tenant for clinic use prior to the flood, was stripped and made to look more like Operatories One and Three with a common tile, paint color and other décor. The floor in the reception area was replaced. And a second Volunteer Tree – a wall decal on which volunteers are encouraged to write their names on the leaves – was added in the hall.

“We can not grow the clinic without our volunteers. It’s exciting to see, too, how our trees are growing with our volunteers’ support,” Ms. Gathman said.

Staff members used the down time this summer to make operational improvements. Ms. Simon established an inventory system so that volunteers can easily find their preferred materials to use in the operatory, and donors know what is most needed.

“It increases our volunteers’ comfort level when they can see what’s in stock that matches their preferences, and not just use whatever’s in the drawers,” Ms. Gathman said.

CDS member Glenn DeWeirdt, vice chair of the clinic’s Board of Managers, explained that these small efforts have big effects.

“Dottie and Melissa, each of our core volunteers on the Board of Managers, as well as the volunteers in the clinic – especially those who served at the old DuPage Health Department Clinic – their passion comes through and has really helped to guide us. It’s kept us motivated to resurrect this clinic for what feels like a second time,” he said. “There is more need out there than we can ever possibly meet.”

The clinic’s production reflects that. The clinic passed the $1 million mark this spring – a measure of how much free dental care volunteer dentists and hygienists have provided since the clinic opened in 2013. October production neared $47,000, just short of the clinic’s $50,000 monthly goal.

Ms. Gathman and Ms. Weber credited the eager return of the clinic’s volunteer staff for the October numbers. Northwest Suburban and North Side branches were the first to step up, with members filling most every volunteer slot on the calendar during their appointed weeks.

Now that things are back to normal, Ms. Gathman looks at the clinic with great satisfaction.

“We had some challenges during the restoration, but I am most proud of how we took matters into our own hands as a team of volunteers and got things done,” Ms. Gathman said. “We delegated when we needed to, and worked together as a cohesive group to make things come alive in a timely manner despite the obstacles that we faced. We stayed focused and got the work done the way we wanted it to be done – and better than it was before the flood.”

The next challenge for clinic leaders is to connect with more volunteer hygienists and assistants, so that the clinic can become a dental home for patients. Dentists and surgeons are always in need, especially during the holiday season. To volunteer, email cds.foundation.clinic@gmail.com or call 630.260.8530.

House votes to streamline ADA membership process

by Will Conkis

The impact of a declining membership base held center stage at the 2015 American Dental Association House of Delegates. It was the second consecutive year that membership growth and retention issues dominated the House from the opening gavel, Nov. 6, to the closing gavel, Nov. 10, in Washington, DC.

Initiatives to grow and retain membership to-date were discussed, and resolutions were presented to do more to stop the erosion of the ADA market share, which went down another percentage point in 2015, from 65 to 64 percent. Eight years ago, the ADA market share was at 71 percent.

Executive Director Kathleen O’Laughlin, in her annual address to the House, said membership growth would require... the ADA to use more innovative measures to attract members. The association has to continue to be relevant as well “inclusive and welcoming” to all members, she said. She added that joining organized dentistry at all levels could not continue to be a cumbersome, time-consuming process.

Resolutions were put forth and approved by the House designed to eliminate red tape and streamline the process, making it less complicated and less time consuming to become a new member.

Outgoing President Maxine Feinberg told the House measured progress has been made on many shared goals of organized dentistry at all levels, including membership, but much more still needs to be done.

No delegates took issue with the idea that more needs to be done in recruiting and retaining members, even though ADA remains the largest and most influential dental association in the world.

Membership demographics still show the largest segment of the membership remains dentists who graduated from dental school in the 1980s.

That situation has implications in many ways for the ADA, including in the budget and what the ADA will be able to do for members and the profession, according to Ronald Lemmo, who was uncontested in his re-election to a three-year term as treasurer during the annual House meeting.

The ADA’s financial footing is sound going into 2016, with more than 50 percent of the operating budget in reserves, Dr. Lemmo told the House. But, he added, the association “finances are overly dependent on the baby boomer dentist.”

That is not a positive omen for the ADA, constituents or components, Dr. Lemmo told the House.

With many baby boomers retiring or retired, revenue from dues is decreasing. And, he added, non-dues revenue lines, significant sources of funding, are in decline because retired dentists do not purchase ADA products, Dr. Lemmo said.

Referring to a chart on the flow of members in and out of full dues status, included in the budget report to the House, Dr. Lemmo pointed out approximately 5,000 student members would be eligible to become full dues members next year following graduation. However, based on previous years, ADA projects more than half will drop out of organized dentistry before reaching full dues status.

If such trends are not altered, he said, future Houses will be choosing between budget cuts and raising dues.

The 2015 House began with projected total revenue of $131,788,000, prior to the transfer of $6.5 million in insurance royalty income to the insurance royalty reserve, a policy created by the House. Budgeted expenditures totaled $125,725,000 before any House actions. After transfer of the insurance royalty funds to reserves, the budget had a $437,000 deficit. By the end of the House, delegates added $797,260 in new spending. The total deficit ended up at $1.2 million.

However, dues will remain at $522. Funds from the reserves will be used to offset the deficit.

That deficit could have been larger. However, the Board of Trustees trimmed $540,000 from proposed expenditures.

Mr. Conkis is the CDS director of publications.

Membership demographics still show the largest segment of the membership remains dentists who graduated from dental school in the 1980s.
GUN VIOLENCE

by Stephanie Sisk

IT IS NEARLY IMPOSSIBLE NOT TO BE MOVED BY THE HEARTBREAKING IMAGES WROUGHT BY GUN VIOLENCE IN CHICAGO – young mothers or fathers killed, families grieving, young children lifeless, horrifying injuries.

Whether those killed have gang or drug ties or are simply innocents in the wrong place at the wrong time, the instability the violence creates, the holes in families and neighborhoods, and the psychological damage to the fabric of the community at large weigh heavily.

For Gregory Thomas, the world opened up the night of Nov. 15, 2014, when the oral surgeon was called to the emergency room at Northwestern Memorial Hospital to stabilize a woman who suffered gunshot wounds to her body, face and jaw. The off-duty Chicago police officer had been shot in a domestic dispute with the boyfriend of her daughter.

Her condition stabilized and follow-up surgery scheduled, Dr. Thomas realized that he could no longer stand by. He had to stand up and do what he could to tackle gun violence in Chicago, one step at a time.

“If she had the courage to survive what she went through, I thought, where can I be helpful to stop this,” recalled Dr. Thomas, who is working pro bono on follow-up surgeries and reconstruction along with another doctor.

It had been two years since Dr. Thomas had moved his family back to the Chicago area after a 10-year hiatus on the West Coast. Originally from California, he had enjoyed Chicago as a dental student at Northwestern University, and his wife’s family is from the area, so their return in 2011 was a welcome move. A staff member at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, he also joined a Near North Side oral and maxillofacial surgery practice.

During that 10-year absence, much had changed in Chicago: the Cabrini Green housing project came down, displacing its residents; gentrification renewed many neighborhoods but drove out the poor; many lost jobs in the 2008 recession and left already economically fragile residents adrift; the city’s public schools continued to decline, the drug trade exploded; poverty rates grew more entrenched in some of the city’s poorest neighborhoods marked by the city’s highest minority concentration – Riverdale, Englewood and North Lawndale – and the highest rates of violence.

Exploring the city’s high murder rate in a July 2012 article in Crain’s Chicago Business, Arthur Lurigio, a professor of criminal justice and psychology at Loyola University Chicago, found 52 percent of murders in Chicago in 2010 occurred in just six of the city’s 25 police districts, areas “plagued by inter-generational poverty, gang infestation, single-parent households, social disorder, and economic blight.”

While exploring various factors for the violence, Dr. Lurigio argued, “the city must come to understand that violence is both a public health and criminal justice problem.”

For Dr. Thomas, that call resonated even louder as he worked on his patient last fall and through 2015.

“What am I doing,” he said he asked...
himself, “to stop people from getting to guns?”

Moved by his patient’s tenacious will to go on, Dr. Thomas started making his own rounds to churches, organizations and dentist colleagues to start the push to raise awareness of the city’s troubles and to spark a desire to act.

He met with leaders of several churches, notably Dr. Wayne Gordon, pastor of Lawndale Community Church on the west side, and Joel Hamernick, executive director of Sunshine Gospel Ministries on the South Side. He sought a foothold to do what he could to make a difference. “Where can we be helpful to stop this?” he said, looking back at those meetings.

Lawndale Community Church has redeveloped blocks around the church, creating health and dental clinics and rehab units to transform that neighborhood. When Dr. Thomas heard about Dr. Gordon’s work, he said, “That’s the man I want to get in touch with.”

Dr. Gordon said the problems facing the poor might seem insurmountable, and the steady drumbeat of murder and shootings statistics might leave most people “callous” to the problems.

Lawndale, where Dr. Gordon, who is white, raised his three children with his wife, is a community of about 60,000 people – and as of Nov. 1 logged 30 murders this year. “If a community like Wheaton or Evanston had that kind of murder rate, people would be up in arms,” Dr. Gordon said.

Dr. Gordon praised Dr. Thomas’ persistence, his heart and desire to contribute, and his willingness to listen to the problems and pledge action are welcome.

“If everybody in Dr. Thomas’ position would call somebody and ask, ‘What can I do to help?’ How wonderful would that be?” Dr. Gordon asked.

“The bottom line,” he said, “is when a person cares enough to get involved – even a little bit – what an encouragement that is. We need others to come alongside with us.”

One of his strategies, Dr. Thomas said, is to raise the profile of groups that are making a difference to make Chicago’s troubles more visible to those who live or work in the city. “Awareness is a huge thing,” he said.

He is working on developing a “roundtable,” a group of like-minded people who can brainstorm ideas, find funding sources and start the meaningful conversations, “then we can have a real impact.”

While the challenge is large, Dr. Thomas remains committed to the cause.

“I can’t fix it,” he said, “but let’s see what we can do.”

Having a real estate attorney is a good insurance policy

No professional wants to think about the possibility of a summer flood like the one the Chicago Dental Society Foundation Clinic experienced in June. Carpeting, drywall, equipment and supplies were damaged, and the three-operatory clinic closed for several weeks.

One of the most important assets in the clinic’s arsenal – alongside its talented staff and passionate volunteers – was a real estate attorney. Executive Director Kristen Weber said the attorney helped clinic leaders understand the landlord and tenant responsibilities as spelled out in the lease, and aided in expediting the clinic’s reopening.

A Chicago Bar Association spokesman likened it to driving a car. “Would you drive without insurance? Because that’s what attorneys are for,” said Solomon Gutstein, who has worked in real estate law for the past 60 years. “Everyone thinks in rational terms, but if a problem arises that is not in the normal mode of thinking and you are already locked into a lease, you can be badly hurt. Attorneys are trained to look for the problems that could arise and protect you against the future.

“We’re not 100 percent, but we try.”

Among the areas Mr. Gutstein pointed to were zoning laws, tax payments, insurance to be carried and responsibility for common areas of the building.

“I’m willing to bet that most professionals never bother checking the zoning for the property they intend to lease,” Mr. Gutstein said. But in his career he has seen cases when inappropriate zoning has shut down a practice that was locked into a long-term lease. “The probability that something like that happens is very small, but if something like a zoning dispute does arise, it’s devastating.”

Another area of concern for Mr. Gutstein is that of property taxes. First, there is the question of how taxes will be paid: by the landlord or by the renter. If it is to be paid by the renter, how is the tax bill divided among all tenants (in the case of a mixed-used building) and who is responsible for the building’s common area? Add to those questions Cook County’s system of paying this year for the previous year’s taxes in installments. It can be overwhelming.

“It’s not a matter of being a professional,” Mr. Gutstein said. “These are the specifics that a real estate attorney is trained to look for. This is just another one of the major problems to be addressed by an attorney because if a dispute pops up, it can be expensive to resolve down the road.”

A tax delinquency is just one reason why the building might change ownership during the term of a lease; other reasons include foreclosure or other judgement against the landlord. Especially in the course of negotiating a long-term lease, a real estate attorney can secure a letter from the mortgagee ensuring that the lease will be honored in case of foreclosure.

Finally, Mr. Gutstein said a real estate attorney who is familiar with your lease could advise on insurance purchases. The lease should enumerate what the landlord is required to carry and what coverage is expected of the renter. Additional coverage may be advisable.

A business attorney has a general, invaluable body of knowledge, Mr. Gutstein added, but clients should not assume that every business attorney can negotiate their new lease. He encouraged dentists to question their attorneys.

“Ask, ‘are you familiar with dental leases?’ If they say they’ve done leases but not dental specifically, that’s a solvable problem,” he said. “If they tell you that they don’t normally handle commercial leases, that’s a danger sign.”

A short brief on conflicts of interest

A CONFLICT OF INTEREST IS SERIOUS BUSINESS; it undermines trustworthiness and ethical obligations and is to be avoided. And we are not just talking about an actual conflict, but also the appearance of a conflict.

Conflicts of interest arise in the work of many professionals; dentists are no exception. The American Dental Association has long recognized the existence of such conflicts of interest. For example, the ADA Principle of Ethics and the Code of Professional Conduct states that a “dentist who presents educational or scientific information in an article, seminar or other program, shall disclose to the readers or participants any monetary or other special interest the dentist may have with a company, whose products are promoted or endorsed in the presentation. Disclosure shall be made in any promotional material and in the presentation itself (5.C.).”

Many of us are called upon to share our years of experience in the profession with our colleagues. That is, at least, one of the bright sides in getting older: one’s opinions and counsel may be in high demand. And yes, very often the speaker may charge for his or her presentation.

However, on occasion, speakers appear to be no more than advertisers for companies, and no heed is given to a fair and even-handed presentation of competitors' products. And not all speakers disclose financial or other incentives they receive for their presentation.

The discussion of conflicts of interest is not mentioned just once in the ADA Code; it is embedded in the entire document. For instance, it reminds us that a dentist rendering a “second opinion should not have a vested interest in the ensuing recommendation” (2.B.1. Advisory Opinion), a dentist may not “agree to a fee contingent upon the favorable outcome of the litigation in exchange for testifying as a dental expert” (4.D.1. Advisory Opinion), a dentist, in recommending a product to a patient, should disclose “whether there are any financial incentives for the dentist to recommend the product that would not be evident to the patient” (5.D.2. Advisory Opinion). These and other conflict of interest situations are described in the code and should be our guiding light in dealing with the public, our patients and our colleagues.

‘What a Diff’rence a Day Makes’

ONCE IN A WHILE, A SONG JUST STICKS and goes around and around in your head. The melody and the message repeat at will.

Finishing my term as Chicago Dental Society Foundation chair, I can not help hearing “What a Diff’rence a Day Makes” in my head. The song may be old-fashioned, but it is personally appropriate as I complete two years serving as chair of the CDS Foundation. As the song continues:

What a diff’rence a day makes
Twenty-four little hours
Brought the sun and the flowers
Where there used to be rain. . .

For me, it has been 24 months in which I have seen the CDS Foundation move out of the rainy days to sunny ones. It continues to mature as an important non-profit and the future looks bright. On Jan. 1 Mike Durbin will ably lead the CDS Foundation, which will no doubt continue to enjoy organizational and philanthropic successes.

When I became chair in January 2014, the CDS Foundation was looking for an executive director. The search process found Kristen Weber for us; she brings professionalism to our headquarters by shoring up the internal and external processes of the CDS Foundation.

THE CDS FOUNDATION CLINIC AND GRANTS

The CDS Foundation Clinic began seeing patients Feb. 14, 2013. Since it opened, several hundred people have been involved in this project: generous dentists, hygienists and assistants as well as members of the dental industry and the community. The Clinic Board of Managers announced recently that now, two years later – including coping with a flood that shut the doors for three months – the clinic’s production is close to $500,000 of dental services to people who needed our help.

All CDS members can be proud of this accomplishment. The CDS Foundation Clinic changes lives. Take a look for yourself at on.cds.org/cdsfclinic.

Our two grants programs – the CDS Foundation Grants Program and the Wrigley Company Foundation Oral Health Community Service Grants – have been very active since January 2014. Over these past two years, funds approaching $155,000 were partnered and leveraged into close to $3.5 million of oral health care for patients in need. That’s an impressive return on investment!

MAKING A DIFFERENCE

Clearly, generosity is a recurrent theme for so many who have taken the time to make a difference.

As I wrap up, thanks are due to the CDS Foundation board and officers. Their advice, common sense and business acumen has been invaluable. The Board of Managers, led by Keith Suchy, continues to rise to the occasion.

Most of all I wish to thank each CDS Foundation donor. You give your time and talent, your money and your enthusiasm. You make me proud to have been your representative as foundation chair.

ALL EYES WILL BE ON SPRINGFIELD THE NEXT FEW WEEKS as the General Assembly considers the extension of the Illinois Dental Practice Act, House Bill 500. The act sunsets on Dec. 31, and the 10-year extension typically is a non-event, but two amendments offered to this year’s legislation have provoked heated debate.

The Illinois Senate voted Nov. 10 to approve extending the Practice Act as amended. The amended legislation was scheduled for a vote Dec. 2 in the House of Representatives to concur with what the Senate passed.

The vote on the amended act in the Senate was 44 Yes, 8 No and 4 Present.

Early negotiations among the Illinois State Dental Society, the Illinois Dental Hygienists Association, the Illinois Public Health Association and Pew Charitable Trust looked at avenues to improve access to care, particularly among low-income populations and Medicaid recipients.

As the amendment took shape, part of it addressed an expansion of treatments trained dental hygienists can perform on low-income/Medicaid patients in public and school-based health centers and facilities. The treatments covered in the bill include cleanings, fluoride and sealants without a dentist first examining the patient, a provision long sought by hygienists. The hygienists must complete 72 additional hours of training and have an agreement with a dentist who will supervise and approve the services to be performed and provide the follow-up care.

Early negotiations among the Illinois State Dental Society, the Illinois Dental Hygienists Association, the Illinois Public Health Association and Pew Charitable Trust looked at avenues to improve access to care.

ISDS insisted this provision be a five-year pilot program, which will sunset if not renewed.

The second part of the amendment would allow dental assistants, with additional state-approved training, to provide above-gumline scaling to children 12-years-old and under who are identified as low-income or Medicaid recipients. The provision is voluntary, and individual dentists would decide whether to allow their assistants to do the supervised work.

Hygienists complete a two- to four-year training program and are licensed by the state; assistants complete a one-year program or receive on-the-job training and are not licensed in Illinois.

According to Dave Marsh, director of government relations for the ISDS, the dental assistant amendment grew out of change sought by dentists to use their staff most efficiently, economically and productively, especially in light of low reimbursement rates for Medicaid.

“This provides a working model,” Mr. Marsh said. Dentists who may have avoided Medicaid patients could maximize the work of their employees, expand services to those in need and perhaps “break even” with the reimbursement. The above-gumline cleaning on children is a “simple” procedure, he said, that would free up office hygienists to work on older patients and more complex cases. The end result would be better access to care with more “complete preventative services” to low-income patients, he said. While the Illinois Dental Hygienists Association backs broadening its members’ duties in public health centers in the first part of the amendment, expanding the purview of dental assistants was not supported by IDHA, which sought dropping the assistants provision from the amended legislation.

That effort to kill expansion of dental assistant duties by IDHA failed.

Dental hygienists are at a premium in the Chicago area, according to records maintained by the Department of Financial and Professional Regulation. In Cook County, there are 4,184 licensed dentists while there are only 1,860 licensed hygienists.

This has lead to an increase in demand for their services and an increase in wages, which can up to $45 per hour, Mr. Marsh said in a conversation with CDS members.

Many dentists working in economically stressed areas can’t afford to pay that rate, he pointed out. Because of the shortage of hygienists, hygienists will not work for less in these areas, he said.

Try to keep up with Sharon Horwitz

by Stephanie Sisk

SHARON HORWITZ IS ON THE RUN – LITERALLY.

Dr. Horwitz keeps a busy Oak Park practice, but what keeps her on the go is a training schedule of running, swimming and bicycling to stay in shape for triathlon races.

Most recently, Dr. Horwitz completed the Illinois Olympic Distance Triathlon Championship in Crystal Lake – finishing 5th in her 35-39 age group. She then topped it off with a grueling half-Ironman 70.3 mile competition in Racine, WI, that included a 1.2-mile swim in Lake Michigan, a 56-mile bike ride and concluded with a 13.1-mile run.

Tired yet?

“I’m constantly trying to challenge myself,” said Dr. Horwitz, who lives in Elmhurst with her husband.

“It sounds wild, but all the years in gymnastics made me rock solid for dental school and for (triathlon) training.”

Dr. Horwitz said she has always been an athlete, starting at age 4 when she began gymnastics. She competed in gymnastic competitions throughout the Midwest then transitioned to running and track and field events in high school. It wasn’t until 2005, when she graduated from the University of Illinois at Chicago College of Dentistry, that she set her sights on a new
The camaraderie that develops among fellow runners has had professional consequences as well, Dr. Horwitz said. Several people she has met in different racing circuits have become patients. "They really understand me," she said with a laugh.

After taking some time off to recharge her battery, Dr. Horwitz said her goal: "I thought, let’s try a triathlon."

She didn’t post a great finish, but it was enough to whet her appetite for a new challenge.

With some 30 events under her belt since then, "I feel like a seasoned competitor," Dr. Horwitz said.

For summertime events, she begins her training regimen in January with before- or after-work runs and visits to the gym – alternating running, bicycling and swimming – six days a week.

"It sounds wild, but all the years in gymnastics made me rock solid for dental school and for (triathlon) training," she said. "It has helped me all my life, giving me a great foundation."

Dr. Horwitz’s grandfather helped plant the seed for her dentistry career, approaching a good friend who owned a dental lab in Chicago to hire on the young Sharon for whatever needed doing. It was a job that lasted 10 years – through dental school – and gave her invaluable insight into the materials component of dentistry.

She credits her grandfather’s role, as well as encouragement from her parents, in her accomplishments. Looking back, "it makes me more grateful and appreciative toward my parents who have always been so supportive," she said. "They literally have never missed any race or event where I was involved or being recognized for something." And she still visits her grandfather, now 94, every Wednesday.

The camaraderie that develops among fellow runners has had professional consequences as well, Dr. Horwitz said. Several people she has met in different racing circuits have become patients. "They really understand me," she said with a laugh.

After taking some time off to recharge her battery, Dr. Horwitz said she’s not sure what race is next, though another Ironman competition is a "definite possibility."

"They say you peak in your early 40s," said Dr. Horwitz, age 36. "We’ll see."

In attendance from our branch were Chester Klos with his wife Dagmar, Daniel Janowski and his wife Candice, and Mary Starsiak and her family. If you have not been to a Dental Arts Club function, put it high on your to-do list. The Starsiaks had a special reason to celebrate. Their mother Virginia celebrated her 95th birthday the day before!

Later in August at the Central Regional Dental Testing Service (CRDTS) annual meeting, Mary Starsiak was elected its next president-elect. CRDTS is a testing service made up of 19 state boards of dentistry.

Not stopping there, Mary is also the new vice regent of the International College of Dentists for Illinois. Way to go, Mary!

Bisco Inc. hosted a factory tour for Northwest Side Branch members at its Schaumburg facility. Spencer Bloom, Larisa Spirtovic and Dave Wojtowicz were among the many members who toured the facility.

George Frayn attended the International Academy of Gnathology meeting in September at the Langham Huntington Hotel in Pasadena, CA. The meeting featured three days of evidence-based presentations on a variety of advanced restorative topics, many by dental school department heads. Great social events followed each evening, including a gala with live music.

Robert Busan and his wife Alice celebrated their 10th wedding anniversary in Mexico by relaxing at the enchanting Riviera Maya.

Jeff Ruttencutter and Priscilla Chang recently celebrated the birth of their daughter, Harper Chang Ruttencutter.

Larry Kolar has enjoyed volunteering for Maine South High School’s local music programs. His daughter Stephanie pulls double duty, performing on the J.V. Hawkettes competitive dance team and playing clarinet with the school marching band! Larry was recently inducted into the International College of Dentists at the American Dental Association Annual Session in November.

It was a busy October for the DiFranco family. Paul DiFranco and his wife Alison welcomed twin girls Zoe and Lexi. Meanwhile, Chuck DiFranco and his wife Marissa brought home a new baby girl Liana to be the kid sister to their 18-month-old daughter Siena!

Michele Bogacki, her husband John, and daughters Olivia and Natale were spotted in Evanston at Ryan Field as her alma mater, the University of Iowa Hawkeyes, trounced the Northwestern University Wildcats 40-10. Rumor has it that John and Michele are looking for a bigger house on Como Lake.
Northwest Suburban Branch
by Sylvia Deek, DDS

Our branch kicked off the season with a wonderful meeting Oct. 6 at Meridien Banquets in Rolling Meadows. The first meeting was Past President’s Night, honoring all past branch presidents. Also in attendance was CDS President Susan Becker Doroshow and President-elect George Zehak.

Jeff Bonk brought his GPR residents from Loyola to the meeting for Robert Lowe’s lecture, “What’s New in Restorative Dentistry” and to also meet our branch president, Vicki Ursitti.

James Wiese and Bob Ryan attended the American Academy of Implant Dentistry’s annual conference in Las Vegas for some continuing education and fun. Exciting new technology was rolled out at the meeting, including real-time guided surgical instrumentation. Frequent Midwinter Meeting speaker Carl Misch was presented with a Lifetime Achievement Award for his numerous contributions to implant dentistry. Bob and his wife Nancy followed up the meeting with a short trip to Zion National Park to wind down on some hiking trails.

As the American Dental Association Principles of Ethics and Code of Professional Conduct celebrates its 150th year in 2016, we congratulate Petra von Heimburg on her appointment to the ADA Council on Ethics, Bylaws and Judicial Affairs. The council promotes ethics to member dentists and the public.

Paul Litvin toured Europe back in late August on an educational and fun trip to Munich, Prague, Budapest, Vienna and Salzburg. Paul enjoyed spending time learning the unique qualities that each city has to offer.

In June, Jim Frett and his wife Jackie went to Walt Disney World with their children Erica, Leslie, Daniel and Nicholas. While there, they celebrated the last college graduation of their four children. Jim also attended the Florida Dental Convention.

Jim had a brush with glory in October. His son Nicholas works for the business management consulting firm North American Corporation in Glenview. The company hosted a visit by the Stanley Cup. Nicholas was able to bring one guest, and Jim was the lucky one!

Renee Pappas and Mike Durbin spent a weekend in October visiting their daughter Kristen in Providence, RI. They attended Kristen’s white coat ceremony at Brown University’s Alpert Medical School, where she is a first-year student.
NORTHWEST SUBURBAN BRANCH

Alan Shapiro, DDS, 76

We are saddened to report the death of long-time CDS member Alan Shapiro on Sept. 16. Alan was a very active and involved CDS member for the past 50 years. He held all office chairs of the CDS Northwest Suburban Branch and served as Branch Director of CDS from 1989-92.

Alan was also an integral part of the Midwinter Meeting having served for more than 20 years on the Exhibit Registration Committee and also on the Registration and Credentials Committee.

At the state level, Alan was Trustee to the Illinois State Dental Society from 1994 to 1997 and served on the State Board of Dentistry from 1996-2004, serving as Chairman in 2003.

Alan graduated from the University of Illinois at Chicago College of Dentistry in 1964 and joined CDS in 1965. He is survived by his loving wife of 52 years, Sherie, his three children Jeffrey (Susan), David and Michael (Jill), and eight grandchildren.

Alan was an avid golfer and life-time Cubs fan, staunch supporter of the Chicago Blackhawks and long-time season ticketholder of the Chicago Bears. Alan was honest, caring, passionate, and devoted to his family, friends and patients.

As a respected member of the dental community, Alan Shapiro was interviewed for the "Couples in Dentistry" article in the December 2007 issue of the CDS Review.

Phil Schefke reports that his oldest daughter, Claudia, recently graduated from Elmhurst College. She spent time immediately after graduation being an intern at Marineland Dolphin Adventure in St. Augustine, FL, where she is pursuing her dream of being a dolphin trainer.

Phil has started his second year as a full-time assistant professor on the clinic floor at Midwestern University College of Dental Medicine in Downers Grove.

Bill Slavin joined other Southern Illinois University School of Dental Medicine alumni for a 40th anniversary trip to London and Zurich, followed by a boat trip up the Rhine River.

Bill’s whirlwind tour led him to Florence to meet up with his children, their spouses and grandchildren. The family enjoyed their week-long stay in a villa, taking a 12-mile bike ride one day and riding Vespa scooters another day. The next stops were Rome, Paris and then back to London.

Bill returned home for one day for a Leo High School golf outing before flying off to Palm Desert, CA, for a week to rest. He’s having lots of fun doing it while he can!

Brent Stanford and his wife Sharon recently visited with their son Sean in Montana and enjoyed a trip to Yellowstone National Park.

Sharon had an amazing experience at the beginning of October. She traveled to the Tohoku region of Japan to visit their daughter Maddi, who was on tour with The Young Americans through the end of November. During the drive from Tokyo to the region, Sharon encountered a country trying to rebuild from the tsunami and the Fukushima nuclear disaster in 2011. The Tohoku region has many villages that were evacuated due to the high levels of radiation. The inhabitants are just and conducted workshops to help the children and families affected by the disaster. The participants are taught to sing, dance, and act. At the end of the day, they take part in a show that is performed to family and friends. Each day the group goes to a new school and does it all over again. Sharon had the experience to travel with this incredible group of young people for a couple days on this life-changing trip.

We ventured to WhirlyBall in Lombard for a fun-filled outing Sept. 27. For the uninitiated, WhirlyBall is a combination of basketball and lacrosse while driving bumper cars.

West Side Branch president Michael Tauber had a blast, saying that playing WhirlyBall was one of the items on his bucket list.

The games were heated, but for some reason the younger members seemed to have the advantage. Everyone enjoyed the competition and refreshments, then returned home to nurse their bruises and sore muscles.

now starting to be allowed to return as each village is slowly being cleaned up.

Lining the road on the drive north (which was newly opened above the previously existing roads) there were rows upon rows of black bags containing the contaminated top layers of dirt.

Workers dressed in white hazmat suits were diligently removing the dirt from the fields with bulldozers. There were also periodic electronic signs on the road – not noting your speed limit, but the radiation levels.

The Young Americans visited schools

WEST SIDE BRANCH

James Buckman, DDS, 75

On Oct. 24, West Side Branch member James Buckman died. He was a leading educator for 50 years. Jim began his 50-year academic career in 1965. He was one of our own, graduating from the University of Illinois at Chicago College of Dentistry (UIC) in 1964. He subsequently completed specialty training at UIC in fixed prosthodontics in 1975.

Jim had a distinguished career of teaching and service excellence. He was widely regarded within the College of Dentistry as a model dental educator. During his 50-year academic career he maintained and helped lead a commitment of graduating the best of oral health clinicians. He served as a full- and part-time faculty member for 30 years from 1965 through 1995. He subsequently continued to teach part-time following his retirement in 1995, encompassing the past 20 years. During this entire period, he maintained a private practice.

Jim served as Interim Head of the Department of Fixed Partial Prosthodontics, 1987-91. He also served in various other leadership roles including the Director of Fixed Partial Prosthodontics, and the Director of Preclinical Section for the Department of Restorative Dentistry. As Director of the Preclinical Section for the Department of Restorative Dentistry, he helped lead the transformation of UIC’s pre-patient care curriculum that continues today. He taught and directed a long list of courses including fixed prosthodontics, occlusion, complete dentures and clinical patient care. He received numerous teaching awards.
George Zehak attended the Southern Illinois University School of Dental Medicine White Coat ceremony Oct. 2. He reports that it is inspiring to see all of our future dentists (Class of 2019). We thank George for representing our branch at the ceremony.

Bob Deaver reports that he is being a good grandparent and is spoiling his 9-month-old grandson, Will.

Bob tells us his wife Karla is doing well fighting a three-year battle with cancer.

Bob recently returned from a trip to Istanbul, where he was working with Médecins Sans Frontières (aka Doctors Without Borders) to provide aid to Syrian refugees. Bob says it was even worse than he imagined. A typical day’s work was 16 hours and his assignment was for five days. This has been Bob’s mission every year since he graduated from dental school in 1982. He has made 51 trips so far. He is grateful to be in this country with all of the blessings that we have.

Patrick Angelo, John Hartman, Frank Trocchio and Marie Walsh celebrated their 35th anniversary graduating from Loyola University School of Dentistry with a trip to the Marina Grand Resort in New Buffalo, MI. They look like they just graduated yesterday!
Rick Munaretto, Stephen Soppet and Jerry Udelson went to Unalakleet, AK, to do some fly fishing. They tell us they caught quite a few fish. Sounds like we don’t have to eat salmon at the next meeting.

Good news for Ahmed Masoud. He passed the qualifying exam for his neuroscience PhD.

Ahmed also took a course on scoring sleep. He is a clinical assistant professor in the Department of Orthodontics at the University of Illinois at Chicago College of Dentistry.

Mike Santucci will have another dentist in the family. His daughter, Beth Pfohl is a D1 at the University of Iowa College of Dentistry.

WEST Side: Kamal Vibhakar went to Scotland and golfed at the legendary St. Andrews. We know they only let the very best play there!

Fall is coming to a close and we are moving headlong into our El Niño winter. The forecasted warmer, drier weather will hopefully allow for our members to attend more meetings and get there more easily! We’ve enjoyed welcoming many new members and dental students to our branch over the past few meetings. Cross our fingers that this mild weather encourages the trend.

Doug Chang presided over our first meeting of the season, and it was a huge success. We were regaled by our branch director Dean Nicholas as he introduced our speaker, Peter Hasiakos.

Veteran dentists and student members alike were able to appreciate the breadth of the lecture “A New Look at Dental Caries.” Joining us in attendance were Peter’s son, Spyridon – a D3 at the University of Illinois at Chicago College. of Dentistry – and friend, Susan Keenan. We continued our tradition of raffling off the vendor appreciation prizes. This meeting’s winners were Taisa Szremeta-Browar, Ryan Vahdani and Robin Blakkolb.

Nolen Levine and the crew of the yacht Challenge earned their seventh trophy in nine years at the Chicago Yacht Club’s Race to Mackinac awards ceremony. This was Nolen’s 40th Mac race. Nolen’s crew has previously won the prestigious Fastest Goat to the Island award. Racers who compete in 25 Mackinac races are invited to join the exclusive Island Goats Sailing Society. Congrats, Nolen.

Sharon Szeszycki incorporated her practice in January 2014 under the name Park Blvd Dentistry. She is proud of her staff (Susan, Cindy, Jenny and Kim) and thanks everyone involved in showing their support as she approaches her two-year anniversary in her new location in Glen Ellyn.

Alvaro Figueroa is proud of his youngest son, Aaron, who is currently in his last year of the oral and maxillofacial surgery residency program at the University of Iowa College of Dentistry. Aaron was accepted to the prestigious one-year fellowship at the Oral and Facial Surgery Institute in St. Louis. He is excited to expand his surgical skills and will gain advanced experience in facial reconstruction, TMJ surgery and treating trauma.

Figueroa Orthodontics held a fundraiser to support Cleft and Craniofacial Awareness and Prevention Month this past July. Alex Figueroa and Alvaro Figueroa thank all West Side Branch and CDS members and their patients who helped them raise more than $5,200 for Smile Train. Smile Train provides approximately 350 free cleft surgeries every day and has helped children in more than 87 countries.

At our Nov. 10 meeting at Maggiano’s, John Pawluk presented the lecture “Treatment of Traumatic Dental Injuries.” We hope to see you at our next meeting on Jan. 12. John Cordes will present some important information for you and your office during his lecture “OSHA and HIPPA Pearls for Your Office.” I look forward to seeing you there!
You can make your Friday Night at the 2016 Midwinter Meeting very special by seeing Stayin' Alive, One Night of The Bee Gees pay tribute to THE disco band.

APPROACHES TO SOLVE THE CHRONIC LACK OF DENTAL ACCESS for the needy boil down to the creation of more providers and more free or low-cost treatment.

The Pew and W.K. Kellogg foundations promote a mid-level provider to alleviate a perceived shortage of dentists. And some hygienists clamor for expanded duties to solve the problem, altruistically of course.

Others think more and more free or low-cost treatment is the solution.

There are numerous initiatives – including free and low-cost clinics – that attempt to address the lack of access to care. They seal, scale, drill and fill and yet an ocean of unmet dental need persists.

The energy, time and money expended to treat dental disease by creating new providers and offering free treatment is analogous to the U.S. government’s War on Drugs that relies on interdiction to cure the country’s drug habit. How’s that working? (It’s like nailing up wall studs in a burning house)

The truth is we can’t treat our way out of the crisis no matter how many new providers are created or access programs are initiated.

An item in the August issue of the Illinois Dental News highlighting members’ contributions to Dental Health Month struck a chord with me. One dentist offered an afternoon of free dental care for children who were direct referrals from their school nurse: only one came.

A study in the January 2005 issue of JADA entitled “A Comparison of Dental Services Received by Medicaid and Privately Insured Adult Populations,” concluded that privately insured enrollees were more likely to use dental services than were Medicaid enrollees. But the Medicaid users had nearly twice the number of endodontic procedures than the privately insured users and were nearly four times as likely to have an extraction than the privately insured group. Other utilization studies demonstrate similar patterns.

So what’s going on here?

There are many factors that contribute to low utilization by Medicaid recipients: Transportation to and from clinics, proximity of dentists who accept Medicaid, social/cultural customs, language and fear all play a role. However, I believe what we have here is a failure to communicate.

Dentistry has long preached that prevention is the way out of the morass of lack of access. But there is no one unified program to disseminate the value of dental care and the methods to prevent dental disease in the United States.

Brazil is the only country with a population of more than 200 million that has universal health care. Ten years ago Brazil faced similar access and prevention problems that grip America. In 2004, a nationwide plan – Smile Brazil – was initiated. Oral health is one of the four priorities of the Brazilian unified health system. A 10-year assessment of the program showed that Brazil is well on the way to eliminating health care disparities and provide all its citizens with access. Brazilian officials caution that this is an ongoing process and not inexpensive.

But there is a plan and the country is pursuing a goal.

If you have no plan, you have a plan to fail. To continue on our current path is madness.

Einstein is said to have described insanity as doing the same thing over and over again, and expecting a different result. We must stop this insanity or else dental disease among our population will continue to soar.
